

Good afternoon my dear friend. I believe it is a sunny afternoon where you are. I'd never been to that specific island.

Now, let's get down to the message I want to share with you and your readers this day. In particular I want to address the one gentleman who chose to withhold a question after you put out the appeal for them. Whether he thought it would make him appear silly, or whether he thought he knew the answer, I don't know. But god, my dear melvin, didn't get to receive the question. I did though. I say to that person that the answers he is seeking he will find from Robert, whoever Robert is.

Robert knows what to do. There you go. You see. We didn't heed all that stuff in between like emails and mystery. You get your answer sir. Of course, do the right thing and let this medium know you can accept it. His ego could do with a polish!

Now, why is it that all of you feel inferior when it comes to asking us over here anything you want to know?

Are you scared of the answers you might receive, or do you think your questions are worthless. Well, neither of those are true. Please my friends, don't get into a state of being with your development and unfoldment, where you believe you know it all. That would not be a good sign. Always remain humble enough to learn something new every day.

I was a medium with a reputation when I lived on earth. Yes, you know of me but does it matter?

Anyway, I always stayed humble to learn from others.

I mean, to be honest with you, some of them did talk utter nonsense, but I did listen with merit. My mother insisted in telling me I would never be so big that I don't need to learn more. And believe me, I'm still learning where I am now!

You know: mediumship is easy. It's the medium that makes it hard. It doesn't need to be that way. Just open your mind and let the words flow from your lips. That's what my medium is doing today in one sense. He knows who I am, but he feels to share my name may appear "reaching". Not at all dear boy. Tell everyone I spoke to you. Ask yourself, why wouldn't I?

You see, there's that inferiority thing again. Get over it.

Now I must shoot off in a moment, I'm working with some other folks shortly.

Remember what I've said today. And if you've forgotten already, read my words from the start.

Enjoy yourselves and do have some fun with it. Its a marvellous gift.

Goodbye -
