

Hello my friend. No, I did not warn you for this session, but I did know you would be connecting with us for this session. We are aware of your future clients a little ahead of them occurring, but please, lets not go into the entire time debate again.

As you have observed over your previous weeks, there are many issues with your social communities that are not as they should be. Please concentrate on my voice, not your own.

Your world is one filled with progression of a rate faster than ever before for humankind. Technology is forcing these changes upon people, as you know with your Artificial Intelligence advancements. During these changes, some core aspects of your social structure are being challenged. The non-binary uprising is one such trend that is questioning who you are as people. Your politicians and leaders are supposed to be upstanding leaders, yet act in their temporary power like detached individuals only wanting to benefit themselves. The fabric of your social structure is under strain.

But over the past few days I know you have also witnessed a few good people amongst the crowds that are living with better standards than some. You've witnessed these few families where the children have been well-mannered and disciplined.

It is these good people in the social community that will hold the structure together over time, while many of the others, find their own position.

I won't comment on the non-binary issue, even though I know you want me to. Your opinions are too opposing for me to intervene. Sufficient to say your world is changing and societies are having to adapt to change at an alarming rate due to the instabilities that exist.

Every generation believes that the previous one was better. All of your life, your parents and peers have compared the times of old as favourable over the current days. Now you and you generation are doing the same.

One aspect of life that humans and animals, and all living matter is capable of doing is adapting to change. Change is the result of progression and progression is the future. And as has always been the case in history, some people, especially the elderly amongst you, don't like change.

I, and other speakers, I am sure, will have mentioned to you on many occasions that it is you that create your future and your place in it. Your focus should be on finding your role and following it with passion. Take your guidance from carefully considered sources and grow stronger every moment

through the personal journey
you are on.

Remember, as we've always said, that everyone's individual view of the world reveals a different picture.
Make your view one that satisfies
your soul's intent.

That is enough for now. Thank you and farewell.
