

You have been unwell again. So soon after the last bout. Our healing thoughts will come your way.

The past few days you've been more aware of how fragile life really is. You've often described being ill as experiencing the walls coming in on you. That is a great analogy. But you should always be aware that your very spirit, filled with essence of your soul, wants nothing more than for you to survive. Often against all odds humans pull through some miraculous illnesses that many would have thought would kill them, yet their spirit fought through.

You too have a fighting spirit. Your instinct to survive has always been high, even if your tolerance for pain is low!

Your spirit will tap into the Divine's source of life, the healing power, and use it to increase your recovery from illnesses. The life God gave you is not as easy to destroy as you might believe.

Take my words and now consider what negative pressures must be applied by a person determined to end their life. A negative force more powerful than the soul.

I've never understood that negative desire to end life, and I therefore wouldn't offer comment. All I know is that life itself, is the only right way forward, even through pain and grief. But that is my view.

The problem comes when the human's mind becomes obsessed with the negative thoughts that become dominating. It is very difficult for the opposite forces, good over bad, to overcome.

We have a special place here called a healing ministry. It offers the highest teaching of healing anywhere. Those that attend are taught everything there is to learn about using the Divine forces of life.

These healers leave the ministry and one of their tasks is to work with the finest healers on the earth.

I thought you'd like to learn about that. Your healing ability is good, but could be better if you were to introduce more discipline.

That's for another day perhaps.

So, know that healing is coming to you from many dimensions. Your spirit and soul wants nothing more than your recovery so you continue your work.

Yes. Your mind said the name Mother Teresa. She is very high in the order in the ministry. When she touches someone, they are cured immediately. And she has visited earth to touch a few deserving people.

I will leave you to have a nap and aid your recovery.

God speed my friend
