

Good day to you. You're what I would have considered a prolific writer, particularly with these pen messages. Well done to you. I wonder, do you see it as a talent? A strength? Or do you just do it without thought? No matter the answer, I think it's a wonderful asset for your mediumship work.

The point I wanted to make this time is one that I'm sure several of your previous speakers must have covered in the past for sure. It's regarding how determined we are here to contact our earth dwellers to let them know about this life.

I'm sure your previous speakers have talked about how many ways you have at your disposal to get a message to, and from, us.

I just want you to know there are vast numbers of personalities here that are constantly communicating with earth people. A great many of our messages are lost. They go unheard, or are withheld by the receiver. Some go on deaf ears, even though we know they are blatantly obvious.

This is a factor we have had to build into our work. We work to ensure that, even after we pass a message on successfully to a receiver, the message continues on to its intended person.

Thousands of messages of varying importance successfully get relayed to receivers, every hour of your days. But the filters used by the receivers block, amend or simply forget what it was we told them.

You'll note I call them receivers. This is because messages don't just get sent to actual mediums: They get sent to whoever we are trying to send it to.

Mediums are better receivers, though even they filter or adjust some messages.

The point is communication isn't limited to specific times or people.

I must say, you've written my words accurately. And I've been made aware that you publish our messages word for word. This, for me, is wonderful. Every single word I transmit to your mind is going to be read by anyone that comes to read them. How beautiful is that.

My final words would be to anyone else reading these words. Please, leave a space in your open mind for us to talk to you. Avoid dismissing the messages and accept them with an acknowledgement, such as thank you.

This has been an excellent experience with you, and I would like to wish you all the very best with your life on earth.

More healing will be sent your way to see that virus away.

Chow for now.
