

Thank you for allowing me to talk to you today. Did you enjoy how we got your attention? You heard that Christmas carol being sung in your mind. That was us!

We were talking about how you are coming back to this island again in December to experience Christmas here. We can't wait to talk to you during that period. We have Christmas time, and there usually loads of us gathered together.

Anyway, that is for another day to talk about. Let's bring it back to here and now.

Over the past 3 weeks you have sat with the pen at least once, sometimes twice, every day. You've welcomed us into your world, and given earth life to our words. And if I may say, so very well too.

I would like to ask you a somewhat rhetorical question. We love talking to people on earth. We get a buzz from it. But what about you? Do you feel you benefit from the sessions, as you call them?

I sensed the cogs in your mind whirling away there. I detected a happy whirl too.

Your partner Jane referred to yesterday's session, after you read it back to her, as like having a conversation.

Wow, she's quick. Of course it is. Because that is what we are doing. A conversation between our worlds that should help all understand how normal we are in this world.

We know you're always carried concerns that you're just making these words up, and that people your side will dismiss it all as nonsense.

Question is, do you think you are? Before you answer, we don't!

The point is, those that don't understand these processes are hardly likely to accept the words you write as originating from some other source.

But whether they believe or don't, the message still gets delivered! That is all we lack to see happen.

Don't worry about convincing some of the others, you don't need to. Just keep doing what you're doing. And be proud of it too.

Time to leave you for this session. Enjoy your nap and we'll look forward to welcome you again!