

Human's desire to progress is what sets the race above all other living life on earth.

But it is more than just a desire, it is a driving force that shapes every action and interaction in a unique way. You see, animals are content living in the moment, so long as they can fulfil their basic and unshining needs. Even an animal that is bred full of name no desires to conjure up other ways to find food. Humans, on the other hand, have so many more skills and abilities

I'm telling you something you weren't already aware of? Of course not. But I am going to surprise you.
Humans that don't program are all too
quick in blaming it
on their circumstances
or someone else.
Every person has that automatic ability to progress their life in whatever way they desire or are driven to. But I'm not talking about progress through time, I'm talking about advancing their own understanding, their own abilities, their education and even their relationships.

Why some people appear not to progress (as far as they should and could) is their doing.
Some people often confuse things in the moment as reason enough to not be concerned about their own progress. That is an illusion and shows ignorance.

I used the word desire to speak my dad. After that word is considered soft and lacking real punch. There is not how desire should be thought of. Desire is like a new seedling. So much potential, so much
depth, so much more to follow.
Nothing was ever
achieved by mandate,

that didn't start first as a desire.

Wouldn't it be admirable if everyone almost were to take a few minutes out of their daily chores and write down a list of goals they might have.

Big or small, it matters not. When those goals are on the paper, they are like that seedling that has just been watered.

Having designs, notions to program life in a poor mind way is healthy for the mind. It could be used as a technique to improve one's meditating.

I'd like to furnish you words to your and your experience with a simple instruction. Every morning, take a few moments to reflect on what it is you desire out of the day ahead. What desires have you that want assist your program.
It is simple exercises

such as this that lead
the mind, fuel the journey ahead, and inspire the driving forces within.

God is with you now and always. He desires to be.

Goodbye.

---