

You remind me of a typewriter
I once owned on earth.

I was a secretary and was so fortunate to have one of the first ever in the office where I worked. I treasured that machine. I used to call it Bessy. I treated it with care and everyone was always telling me it was a in a few of our rooms at home. I remember when the telephone started to become popular. We thought there was magic work. We never could afford one at home though.

Yes, over the years I spent on earth I seen so many devices, as you call them, come into the world.

Over time, my early years seemed so old fashioned as all the mechanical wonders come
