

Who is the font of all knowledge?
Is there even such a source?

Good day to you. There are my opening statements for you to ponder over.

Let me offer you my thoughts
and dispell a myth or two.

There are many people on earth
that are of the belief that people of the spirit world must know everything there is to know. That is not so, I'm afraid to disappoint.

We are ordinary people, continuing
our lives in a different dimension, that's all.

We come here with the collective knowledge we acquired during our time on earth. If we then choose to continue learning and gaining more knowledge and understanding, that is our personal choices. Most of us do choose to though. It's part of growing, and fulfilling the life we have been blessed with, no matter the dimension.

On your planet in your era, you can easily learn whatever you want about any topic and within minutes without much effort.

If you want to know things like why the pyramids were built, then read and learn from ~~you~~ those experts that have studied the topic.

In my lifetime on earth, I was not academic. I read a few books in my time, but - I was a hands-on person that came home from work each night with dirty hands.

I didn't have access to computers or books in my day. I'm not sure I'd have had the interest anyway.

I've gained some new knowledge this life era. I like being involved in some of our sports here.

Anyway ~~back~~ to the opening statement. The only answer I can offer to ~~you~~ their question is nobody. Some might suggest the Divine knows all, but I would find that hard to comprehend.

Why would God know everything that ever happened and all the reasons? The assumption here is that God is a person in form as Namano. He is not. God is a force.

If people on earth want to

to know the answers to earthbound questions, then ask the people that know.

If people want to know about the life I'm living in this world, then concisely ask the questions - But expect some answers to surprise, disappoint or make no sense:

That's the way it is.

Of course, there are some wise people living here. There are people with such advanced abilities with such things as science, biology or physics, that it would blow your mind if I were able to share it with you.

Thing is, I don't understand what these experts are up to and why. It's not in my life.

The wonder of a continuing life is enough for me, I can tell you.

I've never had enough understanding of such matters to be able to explain them properly. For example, everything in my world continues to be solid to the touch. If I see everything as I did on earth. Yes, these things are brighter and different, but I have no idea how to explain to you, or anyone else on earth, why or how the existence of physical objects continues to exist in our world and yet remain invisible to you. I am not a font of all knowledge - Nor are many of my friends here.

The miracle of a continuing life is just that - the miracle. I hope my pragmatic approach has served to reassure you that not because I live in another dimension, doesn't make me that sought after fent.

Have a good day my friend, and all that are reading these words.

Peace be with you - always and forever.